For more than a year past, losses have occurred implicating the Keeseville office, but the reputation of Mr. Nelson as a young man respectably connected, operated to stave off investigation, and in a great measure to si-lence rumors. The attention of Col. North, the secret agent of the Post Office Depart ment, while on an official visit last week to the Northern section of the State, was urgently called to the losses of letters, &c. ! in the direction of Keeseville, and though circumstances pointed with certainty to no one, he at once took measures to ferret out the mystery.

A decoy letter, containing marked money and enclosed in a marked wrapper, was mailed for the Keeseville Office on Thursday, the 14th, and when called for next day, was represented by Mr. Nelson not to be there. The resented by Mr. Nelson not to be there. arrest and a searching examination followed.

A letter from the General P. O. Department. containing a draft on Nelson, as postmaster, and in favor of R. H. Fuller, Esq., a contracand in layor of R. If Fuller, Esq., a contrac-tor on a mail route leading out of Koeseville, turned up in the course of the search. The letter in question had been called for a month or more, by Fuller, almost daily, and he (Ful-ler) assured that no such letter had arrived for him. The letter itself and debim. The letter itself seuled, and con taining the draft, was found at Mr. Neison's tourding house, in his private drawer, and under lock and key. The draft was for $62-02. The original Washington postmark on the envelope enclosing the draft, gave evidence of having been aftered. The date was evidently "August 14," at first, but it had been aftertaining the draft, was found at Mr. Nelson
